The Washington State Military Department (Military Department) Security Section has the responsibility for all security matters relating to Camp Murray and its properties. Since 9/11, the military has been on a heightened alert status in order to prevent further terrorists activities. As a result of the alert status, The Adjutant General has ordered that the Military Department arm its state civilian security guards for the Security patrols and other activities required to secure Camp Murray. The Department requires that all of the security guards are qualified and that there is consistency in the training. The Department does not have certified firearms trainers in-house and must hire an expert firm to train the security guards to meet the state requirements Ch. 139-30 WAC) in order for them to be considered certified armed security guards.
