EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Building Energy Benchmarking Law (RCW 19.27A.190) requires agencies, colleges and universities to track building energy use and make their buildings more energy efficient. This biennial report is required to summarize the statewide portfolio manager master account reporting data.

Key findings

The 2009 law went into effect when the state was making staff and capital funding reductions. These constraints hindered agencies, colleges, and universities from meeting the statute timelines. While funding has limited the implementation of the law, agencies, colleges and universities have made substantial progress.

The greatest barrier to state-owned facilities complying with the law is a lack of meters on individual buildings. It is impossible to effectively manage the energy use of large buildings that are not separately metered. State agencies, colleges and universities must also make tracking and reducing energy use a high priority.

Recommendations

Install energy meters on state buildings – Millions of square feet of state agency and college buildings are not separately metered. It's impossible to benchmark and track the energy use of a building that is not metered.

Expand the Resource Conservation Management (RCM) program – The RCM program helps facility managers reduce energy bills and make more cost effective maintenance and capital investment decisions. DES received a grant of $225,000 in the 15-17 biennium to start a statewide RCM program. The DES Energy RCM Program now has three clients, and a waiting list of more than 20. The cost savings for one client alone may be as much as $100,000 annually. Provide funding to expand the RCM program to serve more agencies and colleges.

Ensure adequate staffing of facilities maintenance and operations – Facilities maintenance and operations must be adequately staffed and trained to keep occupancy schedules up to date and to observe, troubleshoot, and adjust building systems to reduce energy use.

Fund projects that reduce agency energy use – Currently, new buildings and renovation projects are adding to the energy use of agencies and colleges. Future energy use can be limited by funding only new buildings that are capable of using less energy than they make. If done correctly, renovations can dramatically reduce the energy use of existing buildings. Renovation alternatives that don't add space such as shared spaces, hoteling, distance learning, cloud computing, or other creative solutions, should be seriously considered.

Create a culture of conservation and sustainability – State government's organizational culture does not properly value future utility bill savings, energy savings and greenhouse gas emissions reductions:

- In many cases, implementation of energy conservation measures are prevented by a perceived competition between facilities improvements and other mission essential funding needs, even though financial analysis shows that the energy savings pays for the energy conservation measures.
- Cost effective energy retrofit proposals are considered riskier than higher future operating costs.
- Higher future greenhouse gas emissions are not considered risky.
- Facilities Directors, Business Managers, Agency Directors, and College Vice Presidents and Presidents are not sufficiently rewarded for making facilities investments which produce long-term financial benefits or reduce organizational greenhouse gas emissions.
- Major operational and facilities decisions are not driven by greenhouse gas reduction goals.

Thousands of energy-related decisions are made every day by building occupants and agency staff. Possible no-cost or low-cost energy saving opportunities originate in these day-to-day decisions. Management support for energy savings efforts is essential. A culture of conservation and sustainability helps everyone find the best way to complete their mission while still striving for their energy reduction goals. This approach is consistent with Lean principles.

Establish a cycle of continuous improvement -- Completing all cost effective energy conservation is a moving target. As soon as five years after a comprehensive building energy retrofit is done, a new energy audit is likely to find additional cost effective energy saving measures. Changes in operations, degradation of equipment, new ideas and strategies, and new technology constantly create opportunities for reducing energy use. When state government continuously implements all cost effective energy conservation, we save money and reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

OVERVIEW

RCW 19.27A.190 Energy Benchmarking

Under state law (RCW 19.27A.190), "benchmarking" is a tool for finding energy savings in state buildings. Buildings that have high-energy consumption must go through a process of energy audits. If the audit identifies a cost-effective upgrade, the agency is directed to implement it.

What Is Building Energy Benchmarking?

Building Energy Benchmarking[1] is recording a building's energy use over the course of a year. This establishes a baseline that can be used to compare against similar buildings or against itself over time. Energy Use Intensity (EUI) is the unit used in benchmarking. The EUI is the total energy used in one year divided by the gross square footage of the building (kBtu/sqft). Buildings that use electricity, natural gas, propane, wood, or steam, can all be compared using this common unit of measurement. Buildings with a higher EUI use more energy per square foot than buildings with a lower EUI.

Portfolio Manager also provides scores for some building types, including offices, warehouses, dormitories, and K-12 schools. The Energy Star score can be used to compare a building to other similar buildings. Buildings scoring in the 75th percentile or better can receive Energy Star certification.

A building doesn't need to get a score to be benchmarked. Building energy performance may also be benchmarked by recording a building's energy use for one year and using that as a baseline for comparison with future years.

Benchmarking and monitoring building energy use

Studies have shown that metering, recording and monitoring the energy use of a building can reduce its overall energy use. Metering data can be used to:

- Identify under-performing buildings.
- Set capital improvement priorities.
- Verify efficiency improvements.
- Identify successful energy management practices.

[1] RCW 19.27A.140 defines "benchmark" as, "the energy used by a facility as recorded monthly for at least one year and the facility characteristics information inputs required for a portfolio manager."

Why Use the EPA Portfolio Manager?

The EPA Portfolio Manager[2] computer program is free, web-based, and includes free data storage, technical support and training. It also allows statewide tracking and review of building energy use in a secure online environment. It can be used to track changes in energy and water use over time in single buildings, groups of buildings, or an entire list of buildings. Portfolio Manager offers a uniform way to disclose building energy performance.

Technical Support by Department of Enterprise Services (DES)

In 2009, DES[3] created a master account in the EPA Portfolio Manager for state of Washington agencies, colleges and universities. DES provided training, technical assistance, and a website containing resources and links. A copy of the DES Portfolio Manager Webpage is provided in Appendix B.

Four Steps Required by Energy Benchmarking Law

There are four steps required by the Energy Benchmarking Law:

Step 1: Benchmarking Building Energy Use

The Benchmarking Law makes agencies, colleges and universities responsible for developing energy benchmarks for their facilities using Portfolio Manager. The benchmarking reports are shared using a master account managed by DES. Benchmarking was required to be complete by 2010 if funding was provided. Even though funding was not provided, some agencies, colleges and universities did benchmark.

Step 2: Preliminary Energy Audits

Benchmarking results are used to identify buildings that will benefit from a preliminary energy audit. For buildings with Portfolio Manager Energy Star scores, a score of less than 50 triggers requirements for a preliminary audit. For all other buildings or campuses, DES has used the reported EUI to make recommendations for preliminary audits. (See the DES Evaluation of Non-Rated Building Types in Appendix C.)

Under the DES Energy Savings Performance Contracting (ESPC) program (Appendix D), a preliminary audit is a simple review of existing buildings that finds potential energy saving measures. The preliminary audit walkthrough includes the facility manager, staff from an Energy Services Company (ESCO) firm, and a DES energy engineer. It may take a day or less to complete a preliminary audit walkthrough at a single building or small campus.

Step 3: Investment Grade Audits

An investment grade audit is an engineering study. If the preliminary audit identified energy saving measures, the agencies, colleges or universities were required to complete an investment grade audit by July 1, 2013.

Step 4: Building Energy Retrofits

Building energy retrofits implement the energy saving measures identified in the investment grade audit. Agencies, colleges or universities were required to install cost effective measures identified during the investment grade audits by July 1, 2016.

BUILDING ENERGY BENCHMARKING

Executive Agency Buildings

In 2015, the Office of Financial Management (OFM) Facilities Inventory showed that executive agencies owned about 26.9 million square feet of buildings. About 78 percent of building square footage owned by Executive Agencies is on campuses with shared utilities. Most of these campus buildings are not separately metered. Agencies were encouraged to benchmark at the building level if meters were available for each building.

In 2015, the OFM Facilities Inventory shows that executive agency leases total about 8.4 million square feet.

Benchmarking is required for campuses, large buildings (over 10,000 square feet) and leased buildings for which the lessee pays the utilities directly (RCW 19.27A.140(20)). Of the 26.8 million square feet required to be benchmarked, about 55 percent was benchmarked and current in Portfolio Manager in both 2014 and 2015.

Other Agency Owned Buildings

Non-executive agencies own about 7 million square feet of buildings. These buildings represent about 6 percent of state building square footage. Many of these buildings are located on small, remote compounds or in parks. Building energy benchmarking by these agencies is not evaluated in this report.

Non-executive agencies lease about 1.9 million square feet of buildings. These buildings represent about 2 percent of state building square footage. Building energy benchmarking by these agencies is not evaluated in this report.

College Buildings

In 2015, the OFM Facilities Inventory showed that colleges owned buildings totaling about 20.1 million square feet. Most college buildings share utilities with other buildings on a campus. About 91 percent of building square footage owned by colleges is on campuses with shared utilities. Most of these campus buildings are not separately metered. Colleges were encouraged to benchmark at the building level if meters were available.

In 2015, the OFM Facilities Inventory shows that college leases total about 1 million square feet.

Benchmarking is required for campuses, large buildings and leased buildings for which the lessee pays the utilities directly. Of over 20 million square feet required to be benchmarked, about 30 percent was benchmarked and current in Portfolio Manager in both 2014 and 2015.

University Buildings

In 2015, the OFM Facilities Inventory showed that universities owned about 47.1 million square feet of buildings. Most university buildings share utilities with other buildings on a campus.

About 91 percent of building square footage owned by universities is on campuses with shared utilities. Most of these campus buildings are not separately metered.

Summary of Building Energy Benchmarking Status

Table 1 summarizes the benchmarking status of state agencies, colleges and universities. Data is for campuses and buildings with energy data shared with DES in Portfolio Manager in both 2014 and 2015. Both state owned and leased facilities which are required to be benchmarked are included. Previously benchmarked campuses and buildings for which energy data is not current in Portfolio Manager are not shown.

Table 1 - Agency, College and University Facilities Over 10,000 SF in Portfolio Manager

	Energy Data Current (% of Sq ft)
Exec Agencies	55%
Other Agencies	Not evaluated
Colleges	30%
Universities	17%

Table 1 shows the percentage of whole campuses and large buildings not on campuses that are current in Portfolio Manager. The vast majority of large buildings on campuses are not benchmarked for energy use at the building level. For detail on the benchmarking status of large buildings which are located on a campus, see Appendix F.

PRELIMINARY AUDITS

DES recommended audits for buildings or campuses using more energy than average for the agency. Preliminary audits were also recommended for agencies, colleges and universities that had not benchmarked. DES has urged agencies and colleges to do comprehensive preliminary audits that include all energy using systems in each building and all buildings on each campus.

Preliminary Audits Completed in Owned Buildings

In July 2011, DES identified 27 out of 34 colleges that were not benchmarked or that used more energy than average. For these 27, they recommended energy audits. 23 out of the 27 colleges completed preliminary audits by July 2013.

Although agencies and universities initiated preliminary audits, DES was unable to confirm that those preliminary audits were comprehensive and included all facilities.

Preliminary Audits Completed in Leased Buildings

DES has been incorporating preliminary audits and cost-effective energy savings ideas into the renewal process. Energy audits, or their equivalent, are an integral part of the building condition assessment and long-term housing decisions.

INVESTMENT GRADE AUDITS

Agencies or colleges that were using more energy than average in July 2011 were required to complete Investment Grade Audits by July 2013. At that time, less than a quarter of agencies had completed audits. More than 80% of colleges had completed audits. About two-thirds of universities had completed some audits. Informal conversations with agency and college staff indicate most of the increased audit and retrofit activity was due to grants from the Department of Commerce.

BUILDING ENERGY RETROFITS

Agencies, colleges and universities did not pursue all cost effective energy conservation by the July 16, 2016 deadline in the Building Energy Benchmarking Law. Colleges implemented a substantial percentage of the cost effective energy conservation measures identified in audits. Agencies and universities implemented a smaller percentage. One agency, the Washington State Department of Ecology, implemented all cost effective energy conservation measures.

SUCCESS STORIES

Lake Washington Institute of Technology (LWIT) used meters and RCM services to save energy.

Lake Washington Institute of Technology manages two campuses totaling 483,000 square feet. Like most colleges, the buildings on their campuses were not separately metered. Starting in 2009, meters were added as bid alternates on several capital repair projects. In 2012-2014, LWIT used a DES Energy Savings Performance Contracting (ESPC) project to install the last major building meters. McKinstry was the Energy Services Contractor (ESCO). The project was enabled by a Washington State Department of Commerce grant. In addition to the meters, LED parking lot lighting was installed, and McKinstry provided a year of Resource Conservation Manager (RCM) support.

LWIT used an incentive from their utility, Puget Sound Energy, to extend the McKinstry RCM services. They focused on no- and low-cost energy conservation strategies like precise scheduling, temperature setpoints, cooling controls improvements and plug load control. Total weather-adjusted savings reached a million kWh in the first year (12%), for a cost savings of over $70,500. Total ROI on RCM services was 400% before utility incentives.

LWIT took the following steps to monitor and conserve energy:

- Incorporated metering and energy efficiency into capital projects
- Used Energy Saving Performance Contracting
- Pursued energy efficiency grants and incentives
- Submetered buildings to make energy consumption by building visible, and used that information to control energy use
- Benchmarked and kept buildings current in Portfolio Manager
- Used a resource conservation manager
- Made energy conservation an organizational priority

Quote from LWIT Facilities staff person:

> "I will be honest with you in that we love the $ savings but I feel most proud that we are using less coal to generate that electricity therefore our air is cleaner. Also we just saved someone's job. It's a passion with our department. Now we cannot guarantee those types of saving each year. Our goal is steady reduction while maintaining our savings aka hold the line at least."

Department of Enterprise Services (DES) Capitol Campus has reduced building energy use from 2009 to 2015:

DES has been tracking actual energy use of the Capitol Campus and entering it into the Portfolio Manager. This shows the results of energy retrofit projects and energy conservation efforts over a period of years. Energy Use Intensity (EUI) is energy use per square foot, measured in units of kBtu/sf:

Department of Ecology (ECY) has reduced building energy use from 2009 to 2015:

Department of Ecology has been tracking actual energy use in their buildings and entering it into the Portfolio Manager. Lower energy use is a result of energy retrofit projects and energy conservation efforts over a period of years:

ISSUES AND CHALLENGES

The following issues and challenges have prevented the Benchmarking program from collecting complete and accurate results. They have been brought to our attention by facilities staff at agencies and colleges:

1. The lack of meters on state agency and college campuses has prevented benchmarking at the building level. This makes it difficult if not impossible for agency and college staff to effectively manage energy use.
2. Cuts to facilities staff have often left agencies and colleges without adequate staff to benchmark, track and control energy use.
3. Actively managing energy use and reducing greenhouse gas emissions are not a high priority of management at agencies and colleges.
4. Since the Portfolio Manager software is difficult for the casual user, there are errors and inconsistencies in the reported energy use data.
5. Automated benchmarking by commercial utilities is not always available in Washington. When it is available, it is not as user-friendly and reliable as it should be. Energy data is posted months after use. When energy use fails to display in Portfolio Manager, the customer must troubleshoot to find the reason and then call the utility to report errors such as gaps or overlaps in the data uploaded by the utility.
6. There is no established funding for making energy efficiency improvements to buildings leased by state agencies.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Install energy meters on state buildings – Millions of square feet of state agency and college buildings are not separately metered. It's impossible to benchmark and track the energy use of a building that is not metered.

Expand the Resource Conservation Management (RCM) program – The RCM program helps facility managers reduce energy bills and make more cost effective maintenance and capital investment decisions. DES received a grant of $225,000 in the 15-17 biennium to start a statewide RCM program. The DES Energy RCM Program now has three clients, and a waiting list of more than 20. The cost savings for one client alone may be as much as $100,000 annually. Provide funding to expand the RCM program to serve more agencies and colleges.

Ensure adequate staffing of facilities maintenance and operations – Facilities maintenance and operations must be adequately staffed and trained to keep occupancy schedules up to date and to observe, troubleshoot, and adjust building systems to reduce energy use.

Fund projects that reduce agency energy use – Currently, new buildings and renovation projects are adding to the energy use of agencies and colleges. Future energy use can be limited by funding only new buildings that are capable of using less energy than they make. If done correctly, renovations can dramatically reduce the energy use of existing buildings. Renovation alternatives that don't add space such as shared spaces, hoteling, distance learning, cloud computing, or other creative solutions, should be seriously considered.

Create a culture of conservation and sustainability – State government's organizational culture does not properly value future utility bill savings, energy savings and greenhouse gas emissions reductions:

- In many cases, implementation of energy conservation measures are prevented by a perceived competition between facilities improvements and other mission essential funding needs, even though financial analysis shows that the energy savings pays for the energy conservation measures.
- Cost effective energy retrofit proposals are considered riskier than higher future operating costs.
- Higher future greenhouse gas emissions are not considered risky.
- Facilities Directors, Business Managers, Agency Directors, and College Vice Presidents and Presidents are not sufficiently rewarded for making facilities investments which produce long-term financial benefits or reduce organizational greenhouse gas emissions.

- Major operational and facilities decisions are not driven by greenhouse gas reduction goals.

Thousands of energy-related decisions are made every day by building occupants and agency staff. Possible no-cost or low-cost energy saving opportunities originate in these day-to-day decisions. Management support for energy savings efforts is essential. A culture of conservation and sustainability helps everyone find the best way to complete their mission while still striving for their energy reduction goals. This approach is consistent with Lean principles.

Establish a cycle of continuous improvement -- Completing all cost effective energy conservation is a moving target. As soon as five years after a comprehensive building energy retrofit is done, a new energy audit is likely to find additional cost effective energy saving measures. Changes in operations, degradation of equipment, new ideas and strategies, and new technology constantly create opportunities for reducing energy use. When state government continuously implements all cost effective energy conservation, we save money and reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

This data must be maintained for at least the most recent twelve months in a format compatible for uploading to the United States environmental protection agency's energy star portfolio manager.

(2) On and after January 1, 2010, upon the written authorization or secure electronic authorization of a nonresidential building owner or operator, a qualifying utility shall upload the energy consumption data for the accounts specified by the owner or operator for a building to the United States environmental protection agency's energy star portfolio manager in a form that does not disclose personally identifying information.

(3) In carrying out the requirements of this section, a qualifying utility shall use any method for providing the specified data in order to maximize efficiency and minimize overall program cost. Qualifying utilities are encouraged to consult with the United States environmental protection agency and their customers in developing reasonable reporting options.

(4) Disclosure of nonpublic nonresidential benchmarking data and ratings required under subsection (5) of this section will be phased in as follows:

(a) By January 1, 2011, for buildings greater than fifty thousand square feet; and

(b) By January 1, 2012, for buildings greater than ten thousand square feet.

(5) Based on the size guidelines in subsection (4) of this section, a building owner or operator, or their agent, of a nonresidential building shall disclose the United States environmental protection agency's energy star portfolio manager benchmarking data and ratings to a prospective buyer, lessee, or lender for the most recent continuously occupied twelve-month period. A building owner or operator, or their agent, who delivers United States environmental protection agency's energy star portfolio manager benchmarking data and ratings to a prospective buyer, lessee, or lender is not required to provide additional information regarding energy consumption, and the information is deemed to be adequate to inform the prospective buyer, lessee, or lender regarding the United States environmental protection agency's energy star portfolio manager benchmarking data and ratings for the most recent twelve-month period for the building that is being sold, leased, financed, or refinanced.

(6) Notwithstanding subsections (4) and (5) of this section, nothing in this section increases or decreases the duties, if any, of a building owner, operator, or their agent under this chapter or alters the duty of a seller, agent, or broker to disclose the existence of a material fact affecting the real property.

Energy Star Portfolio Manager

EPA's Portfolio Manager is a free web-based tool used to track and report on building energy use. Benchmarking in Portfolio Manager identifies opportunities for energy savings in buildings occupied by state government, colleges, municipalities and schools. The DES Energy Program provides resources and assistance to help our client's benchmark building energy use in the following ways:

- Reports on building energy benchmarking by Washington state agencies and colleges
- Resources that help our clients fund, install and manage metering and building energy tracking tools
- Portfolio Manager training and educational presentations
- Technical assistance by telephone and email

Appendix C - DES Audit Recommendations

(As posted on GA website in July 2011, with agency name changed to DES, and updated phones.)

DES Evaluation of Non-Rated Building Types

Many state agency and college buildings are not ENERGY STAR Portfolio Manager Rated Building Types. For instance, offices and warehouses are Rated Building Types, but college classroom buildings and prisons are not. RCW 19.27A.190 required Enterprise Services to evaluate non-rated building types by July 1, 2011, to determine which of these buildings need preliminary energy audits.

Site Energy Use Intensity (EUI)

Site Energy Use Intensity (EUI) will be used to identify buildings, which may benefit from an energy audit. The EUI is the annual energy use of each building per square foot. If the building is on a campus with shared utilities, and is not yet individually metered, the campus EUI will be used. The building or campus EUI may be compared to the average EUI in the State portfolio for that building or campus type, or the National Average Site Energy Use Intensity (EUI) of a similar building type in the EIA Commercial Buildings Energy Consumption Survey (CBECS). The National Average EUI is useful as a rough comparison, although buildings with unique energy demands may vary from the average.

Using Building Energy Performance Distributions to Find Savings Opportunities

The data collected by EPA to create Rated Building Types is useful for estimating the potential energy savings available in non-rated buildings. For example, buildings in the lowest-performing quartile use more than 35% more energy than the average building. A small number of worst performers use more than twice as much energy as the average. It is likely that non-rated building types have similar performance distributions. For this reason, buildings using more energy than the average make good candidates for preliminary energy audits.

Some building types use more energy. Food Service and Science Buildings are examples of energy intensive buildings. A high EUI does not mean the building is inefficient. However, the financial benefit of reducing the energy use of a science building by just 10% may be the same as reducing the energy use of an office building by 30%. 5-10% savings can often be found in no-cost or low-cost operational or controls adjustments. For this reason, all buildings with high EUI make good candidates for preliminary energy audits.

Based on the probable energy performance distribution of non-rated building types, and the greater financial benefit from small percentages of energy savings in buildings using more energy per square foot, preliminary audits are recommended for all non-rated buildings using more energy than the average of comparable buildings.

Colleges -- Half of the community and technical college campuses reporting in the State portfolio have EUI under 80. Campuses using less than 80 kBtu/sf-yr routinely benefit from DES Energy audits that produce cost effective energy conservation measures. Comprehensive preliminary audits are recommended for community and technical college campuses with campus average EUI greater than 80.

Universities – Comprehensive preliminary audits are recommended for university campuses with campus average EUI greater than 120 (all universities are already conducting audits).

Large Agencies -- DES recommends that agencies with large numbers of buildings, such as DOT, DOC and DSHS, initiate comprehensive preliminary audits of campuses, which use more energy than the average campus in that agency.

Small Agencies -- Agencies with small numbers of buildings will not have enough data to find averages. Preliminary audits are recommended for non-rated building types over 10,000 gsf with EUI greater than 80.

When all state agency and college buildings are individually metered and benchmarked, the building energy use data may be specific enough to identify buildings with lower EUI that would benefit from energy audits. For instance, colleges can compare classroom buildings or gymnasiums across the state portfolio, taking into account differences such as hours of use. At this time, there are not enough state agency and college buildings separately metered and benchmarked to allow this level of analysis.

List of Recommended Preliminary Audits, To Be Completed by July 1, 2012

For all agency or college buildings not benchmarked in Portfolio Manager by July 1, 2011, a preliminary audit is recommended, to be initiated by November 1, 2011 to allow collection of energy data during the winter heating season. The Energy Services Company (ESCO) performing the preliminary audit will put facilities into Portfolio Manager (will benchmark buildings) for the agency or college for a nominal fee. Buildings or campuses will be taken off the list recommending an audit if benchmarking shows they use less than the average EUI as described above and in the table below, and if the preliminary audit found no cost effective energy conservation measures.

The benchmarked status of all agency and college buildings as of July 1, 2012 will be reported to the legislature in a report on December 1, 2012.

If your agency or college is on the list of recommended preliminary audits, please request an audit from DES Energy, or follow the DES ESPC Guidelines to procure the audit from an Energy Services Company. You may request to be taken off the list if a comprehensive audit was done within the last 5 years, and all cost effective measures implemented.

Recommended Preliminary Audits for State Agencies

1. Building uses unique to agencies like DSHS or DOT may not fit Commercial Building Energy Consumption Survey (CBECS) categories neatly. Agencies will benefit from comparing energy use of similar facilities within the agency.
2. Preliminary audits are recommended for buildings greater than 10,000 gsf that use more energy per square foot than the average agency building.
3. Large buildings with high Energy Use Intensity (EUI) have the greatest opportunity for savings because even small percentages of improvement can create substantial savings.
4. Campuses are good candidates for audits even if the campus average is not high. It is probable that some buildings on the campus use energy well above the average.
5. By metering each building and tracking energy use over time, agencies can continuously improve performance.
6. Preliminary audits are recommended for all buildings or campuses not benchmarked in Portfolio Manager, although it would be preferable to find the best candidates by benchmarking before starting audits.

Agencies for which no audits are recommended

Based on the available data, no preliminary audits were recommended for the following agencies:

- Agriculture, Department of
- Commerce
- Ecology, Department of
- Financial Institutions, Department of
- Financial Management, Department of
- Health, Department of
- Health Care Authority
- Historical Society
- Lottery
- Parks Commission
- Personnel, Department of
- Utilities and Transportation Commission

Agencies not benchmarked, or partially benchmarked

Based on the available data, the following agencies are not benchmarked or are in the process of benchmarking. There is insufficient information to determine which facilities in these agencies need audits:

- Enterprise Services, Department of
- Information Services, Department of
- Licensing, Department of
- Liquor Control Board
- Military Department (WSU Extension Energy is providing assistance)
- Natural Resources, Department of (DNR has requested assistance from WSU Extension Energy)

For all agency buildings not benchmarked in Portfolio Manager by July 1, 2011, a comprehensive preliminary audit is recommended, to be initiated by November 1, 2011 to allow collection of energy data during the winter heating season. The Energy Services Company (ESCO) performing the preliminary audit will benchmark the facilities for the agency or college for a nominal fee. Buildings or campuses will be taken off the list recommending an audit if benchmarking shows they use less than the average EUI as described above and in the table below, and if the preliminary audit found no cost effective energy conservation measures. The benchmarked status of all agency and college buildings as of July 1, 2012 will be reported to the legislature in a report on December 1, 2012.

Agencies for which preliminary audits are recommended

Based on the available data, preliminary audits were recommended for the following agencies:

- Corrections, Department of (WSU Extension Energy has benchmarked facilities and shared with DES. DES is reviewing. Comprehensive audits will be recommended for facilities with higher than average for similar DOC facilities. DOC is already working with an ESCO.)
- Transportation, Department of (DOT has benchmarked most buildings, and is doing quality control on data. DES will work with DOT to recommend audits of buildings having higher than average energy use for similar DOT facilities. DOT is already working with an ESCO.)
- Employment Security, Department of
  Preliminary audits are recommended for buildings greater than 10,000 gsf that use more energy per square foot than the average ESD building (EUI of 80), and for which ESD is billed directly for utilities. For building uses unique to ESD that do not fit the office category, ESD will benefit from comparing energy use of similar facilities within the agency.
- Fish and Wildlife, Department of
  A preliminary audit is recommended for WDFW Region 4 Office, which is a Rated Building Type with a rating of less than 50.
- Labor and Industries, Department of
  Preliminary audits are recommended for buildings greater than 10,000 gsf that use more energy per square foot than the average L&I building (EUI of 60). Building uses unique to L&I may not fit the office category. L&I will benefit from comparing energy use of similar facilities within the agency.
- Patrol, State
  Preliminary audits are recommended for buildings greater than 10,000 gsf that use more energy per square foot than the average WSP building (EUI of 111). The labs and Maryville campus were excluded from the average EUI calculation. Building uses unique to WSP may not neatly fit rated building types or CBECS categories. WSP will benefit from comparing energy use of similar facilities within the agency.
- Revenue, Department of
  A preliminary audit is recommended for DOR 6300 Linderson Bldg, which is a Rated Building Type with a rating of less than 50.

- Social and Health Services, Department of
  Preliminary audits are recommended for buildings greater than 10,000 gsf that use more energy per square foot than the average DSHS building (EUI of 116). Building uses unique to DSHS may not neatly fit rated building types or CBECS categories. DSHS will benefit from comparing energy use of similar facilities within the agency. This recommendation to DSHS is based on available data, which may not be complete.

For all above college campuses not benchmarked in Portfolio Manager by July 1, 2011, a comprehensive preliminary audit is recommended, to be initiated by November 1, 2011 to allow collection of energy data during the winter heating season. The Energy Services Company (ESCO) performing the preliminary audit will benchmark the facilities for the agency or college for a nominal fee. Buildings or campuses will be taken off the list recommending an audit if benchmarking shows they have less than the average EUI as described above and in the table below, and if the comprehensive preliminary audit found no cost effective energy conservation measures. The benchmarked status of all agency and college buildings as of July 1, 2012 will be reported to the legislature in a report on December 1, 2012.

Recommendations for Universities

All of the universities are already doing energy audits and energy retrofits. DES Energy recommends universities set progressively lower EUI goals for existing buildings and use comprehensive audits to pursue them. See table below:

Appendix D - DES Energy Savings Performance Contracting Program

Energy Saving Performance Contracting (ESPC) is a method of identifying, implementing and financing energy and utility efficiency projects. By leveraging utility savings along with grants and capital dollars, projects can typically be funded within existing budgets. ESPC is a partnership between the client agency, the Energy Service Company (ESCO), and the Department of Enterprise Services (DES) Energy Program.

Client Agencies receive guaranteed construction costs, guaranteed energy savings, and guaranteed equipment performance. The ESCO and the DES Energy Program team up with the utilities to maximize the available utility incentives. The ESCO can also provide Building Benchmarking assistance, and energy and carbon reduction goal assistance. The DES Energy Program provides the customer with energy engineering oversight and contract management services.

APPENDIX E – Site Energy Use Intensity (EUI) 2009 - 2015

E.1 Campuses over 10,000 sf

E.2 Buildings over 10,000 sf

Note: This energy data is self-reported by agencies and colleges. In some cases, energy data is obviously incomplete, because the Energy Use Intensity (EUI) is too low for an occupied office or college classroom building. The quality of Portfolio Manager data will continue to improve as agencies and colleges use it to track progress toward energy reduction goals.

APPENDIX F – Benchmarking Status of Campuses and Buildings

F.1 Campuses over 10,000 sf

F.2 Buildings over 10,000 sf

Note: This energy data is self-reported by agencies and colleges. In some cases, energy data is obviously incomplete, because the Energy Use Intensity (EUI) is too low for an occupied office or college classroom building. The quality of Portfolio Manager data will continue to improve as agencies and colleges use it to track progress toward energy reduction goals.
